SATURDAY, AUGUST 20.

The country has escaped one calamity. There will be no extra session of the senate, and peace will reign supreme until next December, when the annual bear dance will open in both branches

The war being over, the swords will not be beaten into plowshares for the the reason that they will be used as decorations, but the plows already on hand will do the usual amount of work in the fall on the farms of the country.

The Philippine islands seem to have been taken under the protection and sovereignty of the United States before the news of the signing of the protocol could reach Admiral Dewey. That fact will go a long way in settling the Philippine question when the peace commission meets in Paris.

The war has obliterated sectional strife in the United States, and now, if the southern states will get together and arrive at some understanding concerning lynchings and will contrive some efficatious means for surpressing that crime against civilization, the country will be in pretty fair shape to talk humanity to the rest of the world.

Peace has come, but it has brought no rest to the soul of the free silver, 16 to 1 agitator. Not even unprecedented prosperity is able to assuage the grief of the mourner over the crime of '73, and it begins to look as if a unanimous funeral at the fall election will be required to silence the voice which harks from the tomb of a lost cause.

The all absorbing question of "who will be the candidate for delegate to congress on the Republican ticket?" is causing the politicians of New Mexico to look at each other out of the corners of their eyes. No open hastilities will result from the settling of the matter. however, for the reason that returns received to date indicate that the best man will be nominated.

Germany has met with a well merited rebuff in Corea, The Coreans do not care to give the emperor any excuse for their own railroad business. The experience China has had with the war lord has taught some of the simple eastat arms length than it is to become too familiar with him.

The former Cuban autonomists are said to be in favor of annexation to the United States. The autonomists evidently are among the better class of the Cubans and know that the safest and best government on earth is to be had under the stars and stripes. The vote which will probably be taken to decide the form of government to be given Cuba will doubtless result in a declaration for annexation.

An eastern paper asks: "Have the American people become so mature in the past few months of war that they have ceased to be demonstrative? Or is it that the war has caused so little disturbance of our daily life that the coming of peace makes no visible impressions on our emotions?" Had the editor of that paper been in Santa Fe the night the protocol was signed he would not have asked a question of that kind.

The suggestion has been made that the terms of peace with Spain. A better selection could not be made. The of ability, and he thoroughly understands the situation in the Philippines as well. The interests of America would be much safer in his hands than if entrusted to the care of many of the prominent politicians of the country.

That Germany felt none too friendly toward the United States during the war with Spain is pretty thoroughly understood on this side of the water, and many have been the theories offered in explanation of the attitude of that country. None, however, have been satisfactory. A gentleman who has spent a number of years at Leipzig, in a letter to a friend in this city, in speaking on the subject, said: "A friend says, 'You have given our military system a slap in the face. Your raw militia has completely defeated the Spanish regulars; we supposed you could do nothing against a regular army.' That, and the fact that they (the Germans) hate a republic, explains in part the feeling." Perhaps the fact that the "raw militia" defeated the regulars of the Spanish army, and the unceremonious manner the cabinet for the reason, as he frank- Lee. ly states, that the salary is not large enough to meet the expenses incident to declaration of that kind really means. Secretary Day is not the first man who has held a position of great responsibility in the service of the government to make that statement, but he has the courage to leave a place of honor rather than to become burdened with debt, and for that reason he has sent his resignation to the president.

A salary of $8,000 a year seems to b arge enough to live upon, but the social requirements of the position necessitate he expenditure of large sums of money in entertaining the representatives of the other governments at the capital, the maintenance of an expensive estab ishment, and entails many expenses anknown to the ordinary man. Rich men like Blaine, Olney, Sherman and others who have been cabinet officers have been able to live within their income for the reason that they could add a large private income to the salary. but for a man not possessed of wealth. to attempt to keep up with the pace set by the fashionable society of Washington city on the salary of $8,000 is impossible. The natural conclusions of the situation, therefore, are that only rich men can hope to hold offices which poor men are often better qualified to fill,

There is a political party in the coun try which is constantly harping about the power of money in politics, that a poor man can not hold the higher of- Las Cruces. fices, and that an aristocracy of money, not brains, is governing the people. Still, at the same time, let anyone hint at the advisability of raising salaries to a point where a poor man can afford to take a cabinet position, or a similar of- the fice under the government, and a howl goes up about expenses and boodle that makes the mountains ring with its echo. It is folly to claim that a man should man of the Independent Democrat. have strength of character enough to live within his means. There seems to be only one or two ways to arrange matters whereby a poor man can hope to hold one of the important positions in the government change the social customs of the day. It is altogether prob able that t will be an easier matter to accomplish the former than it will be to bring about the latter. It is un-American, dangerous and niggardly for a nation possessed of the wealth of the United States to debar the talented but poor man from reaching the station in life to which he is entitled, because the salaries paid are not while in office.

Inconsistent Consistency.

What a paradoxical conglomeration of political curiosities the Democratic as "liquid music and bottled poetry." party of the present time is. The things demanded by the members of the open letter to the Democrats of Chaves, Eddy and Lincoln counties, notifying grabbing scaports on the shores of their organization one year are vehemently them that he will under no circumand regularily repeated the next, and there is no suiting them, no matter the territorial legislature, as he does not what is done. The only explanation of the fact that free trade has been clung erners that it is safer to keep the kaiser to so long by the Democrats is, they imagine if protection could be overthrown that groceries and clothing and house rent could be procured without money and without price. It requires considerable inconsistency to be inconsistent all the time, and of received. The game this afternoon will that manner of consistency the Democratic party has a large stock on hand, but at this time there seems to be nothing more in sight to be inconsistent over. The old party is in a rough row of stumps for campaign thunder and election time is drawing near. Friends of the infirm will confer a favor by sending suggestions to Senator Jones, of Arkansas. They are badly needed, and that right now.

HER NAME WAS DE FURKES T. Whereby Mrs. Crosby Was Led to Make a Wrong Judgment. Mrs. Crosby was in the full tide of her spring housecleaning and had just ex-pressed the hope that no one would call that day when the doorbell rang and a moment later the maid came up stairs bringing a card said to be in "good form" by the editor of The Ladies' Guide to Etiette. On the card was printed: "Miss De Forrest. "Miss De Forrest," said Mrs. Crosby reflectively. "I wonder if it can be some one of the De Forrests I met at Mrs. Warner's party. Perhaps it is, and such a sight as I am to receive such swell people as they are. Here, Jane, go down and say that I'll be down in a few minutes. Come right back and help me dress, Jane. Dear! dear! to think that one of the De Forrests should have called and found me looking like this!

Half an hour of "flying around" effort made Mrs. Crosby presentable, and she burried down to the parler, saying:

"I am so sorry to have kept you waiting, but I was unavoidably detained." "That's all right, ma'am. Sorry to have interrupted you when you were busy, but I am introducing a little article here I thought you'd be sure to want, particularly in housecleaning time. It is called the 'Death Dealing Vermin Exterminator,' and it is sure death to moths, carpet bugs, cockroaches or any pests of that sort, ma'am. I've just sold two bottles to the lady next door, and the lady across the street bought a bottle, and you'll never regret it if you buy a bottle. A few drops it sprinkled on your winter thing when you pack them away will"The upshot of it all was that when Miss De Forrest departed she left a bottle of the death dealing compound in Mrs. Crosby' hands while 75 cents of Mrs. Crosby money was in Miss De Forrest's purse. "And to think that I should have left my work and dressed up in my best house dress for this!" said Mrs. Crosby as sh olimbed the stairs with Miss De Forrest's card in one hand and the bottle in the other. - Detroit Free Press.
